PC Connection

To connect your audio mixer to a PC, open the settings menu on your PC and go to the Bluetooth & Devices menu of the computer used to power your audio mixer and make sure the device "Vivaud1" is paired as an audio device.

If the device is not paired, then find "Vivaud1" on the list of available devices and click to pair.

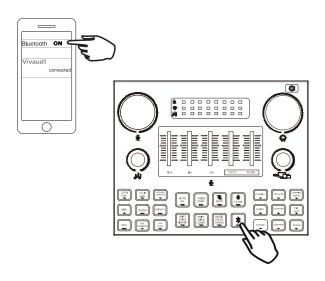

Note: The device should be listed as an audio source.

Bluetooth Connection

You can play audio and record on a connected Bluetooth device.

- To connect a Bluetooth device to your audio mixer, go to the Bluetooth settings menu of your Bluetooth enabled device and turn on Bluetooth.
- Press the Bluetooth button located on the control panel of your sound mixer. The button will flash blue to indicate that Bluetooth connection is available
- Go to the Bluetooth menu on your device and select "Vivaud1" from the list of available devices. The button's blue light will stop flashing and keep shining to indicate that Bluetooth is connected.
- To turn off Bluetooth mode, press the Bluetooth button again. The blue light will stop shining when Bluetooth mode is turned off.

Recording and Broadcasting

After powering on and getting familiar with your sound mixer, you can now use it to record or broadcast your sound mix.

To record your sound mix, open a sound recording software on your connected device. Then start recording. If you do not have a default sound recording software on your device, you can download one.

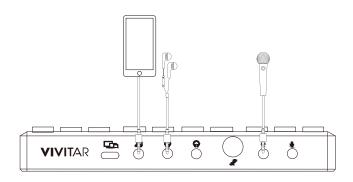

For live broadcasting and streaming, open a live broadcasting program or streaming platform on a connected device.

IMPORTANT NOTES

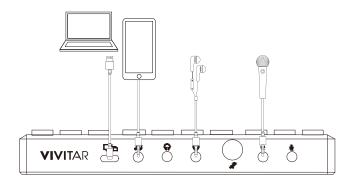

- --Live broadcasting and recording functionality is compatible with most laptops and desktop computers as well as most Google Android smartphones. Please note that your sound mixer's live broadcasting and recording functionality is not compatible with Apple iPhones and other iOs devices.
- --This device is compatible with most standard sound recording software. It is important to test this device with your choice of recording software. If the device does not perform, please try using a different software.
