Change Contents:
Like prior family members already approved, the new CX100 test instrument is based on a similar platform, where different test modules that attach to the base unit platform to support different test and measurement applications. The measurement modules do not affect RF performance of the base unit's enclosed radio.

Externally, the base unit housings for the CX100 have cosmetic differences in mechanical features to enhance the degree of water resistance offered by the enclosure. The CX100 base unit has a modified internal PCB arrangement to support USB 3.0 and fewer USB and Ethernet connectors. Most critically, for both models, the radio, antenna and mechanical design of the forward-facing antenna compartment and its position and proximity to the user remains unchanged.

Sincerely,
