

According to the block diagram, the converter has AGC circuit that can lock the output at a constant level.

Simultaneously, when the input signal exceeds the dynamic range, the circuit's attenuator will automatically attenuate within the limit of the output level.

